To: Office of the Secretary
Attn: The Honorable Arthur I. Steinberg
Administrative Law Judge

RESPONSE TO NOTICE OF SUPPLEMENTAL AUTHORITY

Respondent Entergy Arkansas, Inc. ("EAI"), through undersigned counsel, hereby provides its Response to Complainants' July 9, 2007, Notice of Supplemental Authority (the "Notice"). This Response is timely filed pursuant to the Order of the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") issued July 17, 2007, granting EAI an extension of time up to and including July 23, 2007, to file its Response.

In the latest installment of Complainants' ongoing effort to shift the focus of this matter from the merits, Complainants have filed their Notice relating to EAI's ongoing rate application pending before the Arkansas Public Service Commission ("APSC").¹ Although this rate application (and therefore the Notice itself) has no relevance to the present matter, it appears that Complainants are using the Notice to continue their smear campaign against EAI.

I. EAI DID NOT ABUSE THE DISCOVERY PROCESS IN THE RATE CASE

No pleading filed by the Complainants would be complete without the now familiar claim of discovery abuse. Complainants' Notice is no exception. Complainants assert that the APSC found EAI "refused to provide supporting documentation in discovery." This is absolutely false and misleading.

Assuming Complainants undertook their minimal duty to make a good faith investigation of their claims, they know that EAI properly filed objections to certain discovery requests propounded upon it relating to the expenses at issue in the APSC proceeding. By simply reviewing the publicly available docket sheet, Complainants know that there was never a motion to compel filed against EAI, much less an order compelling EAI to further respond to discovery. See Exhibit 1 (docket sheet for the APSC rate case). Instead, EAI and the propounding party reached an agreement whereby instead of EAI producing an unmanageable number of invoices and other supporting documents, a summary of vendor invoices was produced from which a random sample of documents was to be selected by the propounding party. Under the parties' agreement, this random sample would then be used to extrapolate disallowable expenses. This agreement between the parties to produce a random sample can hardly be described as a "refusal" to produce documents. See Exhibit 2 (Attorney General's Twelfth Set of Data Requests to Entergy Arkansas, Inc. and related responses from EAI).

EAI acknowledges that it has a fundamental disagreement with the way the parties' agreement regarding the random sample was handled by the party opposing EAI's rate request in the APSC proceeding. EAI contended in the testimony of J. David Wright that the sample taken was not random and that inaccurate extrapolations were then made to exaggerate the size of unrecoverable expenses. See Exhibit 3 (a portion of the March 5, 2007, rebuttal testimony of J. David Wright). Though the APSC disagreed with this position, EAI does not believe its objection is any less valid. Further, while the language of the APSC Order which is quoted by the Complainants describing EAI's dispute with the way this issue was handled is ambiguous and vague when taken out of context, in no way does the Order show any sort of discovery abuse on the part of EAI. The truth of this is in the APSC public record and was therefore known to Complainants. Complainants chose to ignore the facts and proceeded on their normal course of misleading and false accusations.

II. EAI IS NOT ATTEMPTING TO RECOVER COSTS FROM THE 2000 ICE STORMS

As the ALJ will recall from the Pole Attachment Complaint, Complainants' original theory of this case was that EAI was attempting to recover from Complainants costs EAI incurred as a result of the ice storms of 2000. See Complaint at ¶ 71. In their Notice, Complainants imply that EAI is still attempting to recover those storm costs, now through the rate case pending before the APSC. As Complainants already knew, however, that is simply wrong.

As EAI demonstrated through its Response to Complaint, EAI recovered substantially all of its increased expense and cost to repair damage to its plant caused during or as a result of the ice storms of 2000. This was done through a separate docket proceeding with the APSC. See Declaration of Steven Strickland (attached to EAI's Response to Complaint as Exhibit 16). In his declaration, Mr. Strickland referenced the applicable docket, In Re: Application of Entergy Arkansas, Inc. for Approval to Use Transition Cost Account funds to pay for Ice Storm Costs, Docket No. 01-296-U. Like the APSC Order attached to Complainants' Notice, the proceedings in that 2001 case were public and available to Complainants. Despite having Mr. Strickland's testimony and the proceedings from the 2001 case, Complainants purposefully and wrongfully implied to the ALJ that EAI was still attempting to recover its costs from the 2000 ice storms.

Complainants were also aware of the misleading nature of their implication through the public testimony of David Wright. Mr. Wright testified that EAI was not attempting to recover any costs relating to the 2000 ice storms in the present APSC rate case. See Exhibit 4 (testimony of J. David Wright at p. 1250).

III. THE PURPOSE OF EAI'S BPL PROJECT HAS NEVER BEEN TO COMPETE WITH COMPLAINANTS

Perhaps recognizing that their initial theory (i.e., that EAI is attempting to recover costs from the 2000 ice storms from Complainants) has no support or basis in fact, Complainants have now concocted a new theory – that the safety inspections performed on Complainants' cable plant is somehow part of a grand scheme by EAI to (1) identify the location of all of EAI's electric transformers at Complainants' expense, and (2) have Complainants rearrange their facilities on EAI's poles in order to provide space for EAI to install broadband over power lines ("BPL") facilities so that Entergy may compete against Complainants in the field of broadband, information, and data services. EAI has already fully addressed these arguments in its response to Complainants' Motion to Compel. Nonetheless, Complainants point out that the APSC has approved the costs incurred by EAI relating to its nascent BPL project.

The APSC did not make any finding that would support Complainants' claims that EAI's BPL project is to be used to compete with Complainants. Instead, and as set out in the APSC's press release attached to Complainants' Notice as Exhibit 2, the APSC approved EAI's request to recover costs relating to the BPL project because it would enhance EAI's mission of providing reliable electric service to its customers. As stated in the press release:

In its Order, the Commission stated that it wanted to establish a policy to promote "new technologies which could provide more efficient utility operation" that will lead to “direct ratepayer benefit.” The expenses that the Commission’s order allows EAI to recover include the cost of EAI’s recently-deployed “broadband over power lines” project, which is designed to study the feasibility of utilizing this new technology to enhance service delivery, outage detection and service restoration, as well as the potential future deployment of cost-effective and efficient demand response technology and advanced metering capabilities.

- See Notice at Exhibit 2.

The APSC did not adopt Complainants’ far-fetched theory, and neither should the ALJ.

WHEREFORE, THE PREMISES CONSIDERED, Respondent Entergy Arkansas, Inc., responds to Complainants' Notice of Supplemental Authority and respectfully requests that the Administrative Law Judge take action in this proceeding consistent with the positions set forth herein.

Respectfully submitted,

2:25:00 PM 1/25/2007	130 . Order #6 (Commission) The Commission is not persuaded that 40 U.C.C. 501 (c) mandates that this Commission must grant intervenor status to the Federal Executive Agencies (FEA). However, if in the exercise of its discretionary authority, the Commission were to grant intervention in this Docket on behalf of the federal agencies, this statutory language clearly directs that the representation of such agencies "shall" be accomplished through the Administrator of the General Services. The FEA's second argument in support of its intervention is more persuasive. Unlike the private commercial interests of the Arkansas Electric Energy Consumers, the Kroger Company and the Commercial Group, the FEA seeks to represent the interests of the Federal Government, including the interests of the Little Rock Air Force Base. As argued by the FEA, "what happens in this case could affect national security." Therefore, the Commission finds that the interests to be represented by the FEA in this case are not adequately represented by the other parties to this Docket and their Petition to Intervene is granted. js
